Presenting Current State of the Art View of Care Coordination and Telehealth Programs

This Conference will Provide

A comprehensive review of Care Coordination and Telehealth programs. Evidence based clinical studies and practices will be presented that have been successfully implemented in Telehealth programs. Presentations will be grounded in the health needs of the patient populations they have been designed to serve, and the relevant clinical, technical, and management processes discussed in this context. This conference is designed to meet current and future Care Coordinators and Telemedicine Coordinators development needs.

Our Audience

All practitioners, IT staff, and managers involved in Telehealth and Care Coordination innovations. This group may include, but is not limited to: Advanced Registered Nurse Practitioners, Clinical Dietitians, Care Coordinators, Care Managers, Case Managers, Mental Health Care Professionals, Physicians, Physician Assistants, Pharmacists, Registered Nurses, Rehabilitation Specialists, Social Workers, and Telemedicine Coordinators.

Conference Participants will be able to:

1. Identify the key clinical, technical, and business elements necessary to sustain successful Care Coordination and Telehealth Programs.
2. Apply these concepts and applications to tailor their programs to various clinical settings.
3. Identify why offering patient choice and measuring patient satisfaction are key components in incorporating patient self management in Care Coordination and Telehealth programs.
